Alumni Special

When regular publication of THE DIAMOND resumed with the Spring issue, we featured the 135th and 136th Conventions. Summer '79 is devoted primarily to Alumni of Psi Upsilon, an emphasis we hope to perpetuate at least once each year. The next issue, to be dated Fall, will highlight Active Brothers, with Chapter reports and words and pictures of the Psi U's of 1979-80.

Nobody Would Ask Me, But:

For as long as I can remember, I've had a fascination about numbers. In my undergraduate days, I managed to take every course in mathematics available. In my senior year, I found no courses offered except a weekly, one-hour session called, "The Theory of Numbers." I enrolled, and quickly found the subject even more fascinating that it had ever been. Numbers take their place in everything, including the most complicated pieces of music from the pens of the world's great composers.

Numbers take an important place, as well, in that exclusive circle of those who wear the golden badge of Psi Upsilon. When Bob Morey assumed office as President of the Executive Council, his dearest ambition was to build the Fraternity's Endowment Fund to a total of one million dollars. During his terms of office, he has repeated that desire, pointing toward achievement by the date of Psi Upsilon's 150th anniversary. If numbers serve me correctly, there are but four short years left to accomplish the goal.

Through the Fraternity's annual giving campaign, we have managed to stay abreast of the day-to-day expenses of our central office and our publication without having to dip into the endowment. The generosity of our Brothers who contribute to the annual giving program has kept us even, but growth of the endowment fund is slow.

Those who conceived the idea of an endowment, and who have provided the financial foundation upon which we hope to build, would agree with Bob that a one million dollar goal is sensible, desirable, and attainable by 1983.

How will we get there? Well, let's look at some numbers.

To the best of my knowledge, there are at least 17,000 living members of Psi Upsilon scattered throughout the United States, Canada, and the rest of the free world. If each of these 17,000 would lend a hand, with as little as $14.70 over each of the next four years, we'd make it.

For some of us, $14.70 times four may be a bit dear to part with. But for each of those who can share but one, five, or even 10 dollars, there is another willing and able to send considerably more. The contributions from each of the 17,000 brothers of Psi Upsilon would produce the million we've been talking about, and would assure the future of Psi Upsilon.

Each of us has to play a part if we are to be able to announce that 1983 is not only the 150th anniversary of Psi Upsilon, but our "One Million Dollar Year." We can do it, but it cannot be done without you, and me, and each of our 16,998 brothers.

Let's make our million dollar endowment a tribute to those who have gone before us, to those of us still here, and to those who will someday share the happy experience which has been ours. And let's make it a tribute to Bob Morey, a true leader.

from the PRESIDENT'S DESK

When our hallowed Fraternity was organized by its founders, one very important principle which was included was discipline. More often than not we think of discipline as some form of punishment. I prefer to think of it, however, as self-discipline on the part of an individual, enabling him to live in accordance with accepted rules and laws of conduct. To Psi U's, members of a voluntary association, this means a pledge by each individual to promote the "highest moral, intellectual and social excellence" among its members. Success in such an undertaking requires a joint effort of such magnitude that each individual receives the full support of all members.

This is the element of Psi Upsilon upon which the autonomy of the Chapters is based. Without this self-discipline to act and live together in harmony, the loose structure of our organization is in jeopardy. Self-discipline begets responsibility, and responsibility leads to leadership, the natural result of the association of our "adamantine chain of brothers." Psi Upsilon always has been among the foremost fraternities in producing leaders for business, politics, and the various professions.

"Some are pulpiterring with a fame that will endure;
Some are doing doctoring equipped to kill or cure;
Legal lights and business knights and Thespiani sure!
Bright fame and ducats a'raking."

With this principle in mind, let us renew our pledge to each other to act nobly and unselfishly in all circumstances that are honorable and for the common good. Let us resist always the temptation to do our own thing to the detriment of the whole. By so doing Psi Upsilon will continue its march in the forefront of college fraternities.

"We're all birds of a feather,
We're always found together,
And naught can come to sever
Our hearts so true."

BOB MOREY, Pi '20

Mu Convention a Winner; Founders' Day November 16

The 136th Convention of the Psi Upsilon Fraternity was held August 23-26, in Minneapolis, and turned out to be another outstandingly-hosted gathering. The Mu Chapter did themselves proud in their efforts and a write-up of all of the events will be coming your way in an early issue of THE DIAMOND.

With an ever-increasing effort to have Founders' Day celebrated by all Psi U's across the country in each of the metropolitan cities, you are reminded that a definite date has been set for the New York City gathering. The Psi Upsilon Association of Metropolitan New York, presided over by Donald Gordon Piper, Pi '59, will hold their annual event at the University Club on Fifth Avenue, Friday evening November 16, 1979. It is hoped all New York area Brothers will turn out for it!

IN MEMORIAM

NELSON ALDRICH ROCKEFELLER, Zeta '30

(In the Summer, 1971, Issue of THE DIAMOND, the late Peter A. GaBauer wrote an in-depth article on Nelson Rockefeller and it is from that fine treatise that we have garnered some further information.)

Nelson Aldrich Rockefeller, Zeta '30, died at his New York City headquarters on January 26, 1979, at the age of 70, thus bringing to an end a long lifetime dedicated to his fellow men, not only in the United States but around the globe. Final services were held later that week at the Rockefeller-sponsored Riverside Church in upper Manhattan, with many national and international luminaries present. Rev. Henry Sloane Coffin, Pastor, officiated and Dr. Henry Kissinger, former U.S. Secretary of State, delivered the eulogy.

College fraternities since early time, and Psi Upsilon in particular, have had a profound influence on all fields of human endeavor, and Nelson Rockefeller's life was nurtured by such influences. At the age of 18, he entered Dartmouth College as a freshman, and by coincidence, his roommate turned out to be John French, Jr. (later also Zeta '30). Someone once said of him that Nelson was an honest-to-goodness Christian — thoughtful of others, and one with whom everyone always felt at home. Even in those collegiate days, we are told, he was constantly striving to better get to know his fellow men.

During the decade that followed graduation, he was a world traveler, plaza-building pioneer, large land owner in South America, and an outstanding exponent of the need in those days for friendly relations between the North and South American hemispheres. Later in the thirties, Nelson became the very proud head of the $125 million Rockefeller Center in New York, conceived and developed by his father. Today, this mass of modern skyscrapers stands as a lasting memory to the Rockefeller ability and vision.

The year 1940 saw Nelson Rockefeller's entrance into the political arena. On his 32nd birthday, he accepted President Franklin D. Roosevelt's call to come to Washington to accept the post of Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs. This kept him on the Washington scene through mid-1946. He became Assistant Secretary of State, and during that period of his life, played a most important role in "coordinating" people in both hemispheres.

Joe Alex Morris' Nelson Rockefeller — A Biography, published by Harper Brothers, tells the little-known fact of a major role Brother Rockefeller played in bringing the headquarters of the United Nations to New York City in 1946, when it appeared Philadelphia would be the choice. Nelson used a little persuasion on his father and caused the elder Rockefeller to purchase the present site along the East River for $8.5 million — and give it to the United Nations!

In 1955, Rockefeller joined the Federal government again when he accepted the position of Special Assistant to President Dwight D. Eisenhower. In 1958, he ran against Averill W. Harriman, Beta '13, for the governorship of the State of New York, and defeated him in the race. This story continued with the same success, when in 1971, he became the first four-term Governor of the Empire State, a long and distinguished tenure.

In the 70's, he was called on again to serve in the Federal government, as Vice President of the United States under President Gerald R. Ford, following the toppling of Nixon. However, 1977 saw the Democrats swept into the White House and Brother Rockefeller once again returned to private life. His last days were active with travel and the various family ventures. He was most interested in his large art collection, and at the time of his death he was authoring texts on this subject and preparing to market reproductions of his vast personal collection, one of the finest in the world.

In short, Nelson A. Rockefeller was an outstanding person, involved with his family, his fraternity, his country and the entire world. All of us are the better for his having been here.

— J.K.M.

(The following is a reprint from the Dartmouth Alumni Magazine for March, 1979. With the kind permission of Editor Dennis A. Dinan, Zeta '61, it appears in its entirety, as it was our feeling that it presented the "Dartmouth" side of the late Nelson A. Rockefeller, Zeta '30.)

Nelson Rockefeller

A Fierce Sense of Determination

It was easy to be cynical about his wealth and power. And it was easy to view Dartmouth's conferral of three honorary degrees and a Trusteeship on this one alumnus as transparent attempts to share his wealth and power. In the case of Nelson Rockefeller and Dartmouth, however, the cynics miss the truth.

The man who became four-term governor of the nation's richest, most complicated state, who three times tried for the Presidency, who commanded vast resources of his own, entered Dartmouth in 1926. He was the grandson of John D. Rockefeller, a name, as President Dickey once said, "behind whose renown many would doze." If there was surprise that a Rockefeller chose a small, rural college, his father had an answer: "Once I said to one of my sons, 'If I were looking for a college, I would find out what college Dr.

Hopkins is president of, and go there.'"

Nelson Rockefeller did not doze at Dartmouth: Phi Beta Kappa, Palaeoptus, Green Key, Cabin and Trail, class vice president, Casque and Gauntlet, soccer, president of "The Arts," editor of Pictorial, Psi Upsilon, Senior Fellow. There was righteous indignation — as a freshman he wrote a long letter criticizing the "hypocrisy" of the fraternity system (later he joined Psi U and made lifelong friends there). There was self-parody — he posed as a grasping taxi driver in a take-off on Don Juan. There was enthusiasm for the outdoors and for learning. He majored in economics but gave it up (it was too much like working for money, he said) when selected for the first group of Senior Fellows.

Just before graduating, he wrote in the ALUMNI MAGAZINE that the Senior Fellowship had changed his whole attitude toward education. "It is no longer the old game of just doing enough work to pass exams and get good marks. . . . I have been working for the personal joy and the satisfaction derived from it. There are new fields to be explored, past histories to unfold, paintings new and old to see. I don't claim to have sprouted wings . . . but I have developed a growing enthusiasm and appreciation which will stay with me." That last undergraduate year was spent in an intense, freewheeling exploration of art, and Rockefeller never forgot his lessons. Less than a year before he died, he told a New York Times interviewer that "art has been a major factor in my life, my joy and distraction, my balance under the pressures of political life."

In 1942, he was elected to his first term as an alumni Trustee, then the youngest Trustee in modern times. In Washington during the war, he worked in the State Department with a Dartmouth contemporary, John Sloan Dickey '29, who within a short time became President of Dartmouth. Other wealthy, powerful, politically motivated men might have neglected their old college, their old college friends. Rockefeller served ten years as a Trustee, put on picnics for his class, spoke at the Great Issues course, went to football games, guided Hopkins Center to its completion, exuberantly presided over dinners 20 years apart honoring his friends Ernest Hopkins and John Dickey, wrote warm letters to former teachers and their wives. He immersed himself in Dartmouth, as John Dickey characterized his life, with "a fierce sense of determination."

There were gifts too. Funds for the Public Affairs Center, funds (as well as personal energy) for Hopkins Center, many anonymous donations. He was proud of Hopkins Center, and he delighted in bolstering what had given him so much satisfaction in 1930 — the art program. His last gift to the College, for the Campaign for Dartmouth, was a Picasso oil painting.

In Dartmouth terms, what distinguished Nelson Rockefeller was his kinship with so many other loyal alumni. He cared deeply for the place, he took so much from it, he gave a great deal to it. This is not to suggest that he was one of the regular guys. He wasn't.

In 1974, when his classmate became Vice President of the United States, Francis Horn '30 wrote for the ALUMNI MAGAZINE: "Nelson was, as I recall, elected by our class as the one most likely to succeed in life. He had quite a start over most of us — not just in family and finances but in brains, health, industriousness, and the many other qualities I have spoken of. But he could have flubbed it, even with all the advantages he had. Instead, he has more than lived up to our expectations." D.A.D.

Luncheon With Nelson Rockefeller

Every year since graduation, the 1930 Psi Upsilon delegation at Dartmouth has met for a pre-Christmas luncheon in New York City, a tradition originated and kept alive by our senior Archon, George Warren French. "Bud" French passed away in January, 1978, much mourned by the many of us who loved and respected him, but our annual 1930 Zeta luncheon was held as usual December 7, 1978, at the University Club. Among those in attendance was Brother Nelson A. Rockefeller, just weeks away from death.

At the start, seven of us were present: John French, Brother Rockefeller's Dartmouth roommate, and for many years a New York attorney; Fred Page, former President of Tri-Continental Corp.; Jack Wooster, former Vice-President and Treasurer of Coats and Clark, Inc.; Shaw Cole, Chairman of the Board of Pitometer Associates, Inc.; Lee Chilcote, Chairman of the Chilcote Co.; Dick Hood, retired FBI executive and former Assistant to the President of the Union Railroad; and Lew Callaway, Jr., former Publisher of Newsweek.

Then, as we were standing for the customary saying of grace, in came Brother Rockefeller to join us. He was his usual hearty, ebullient self, in great good humor, and looked as though he would live to be at least a hundred.

Nelson was at his friendliest, most gracious best — and that is mighty good. Almost immediately, the conversation turned to the threat to fraternities at Dartmouth. Somewhat to our surprise, he was very strong in defense of the important role he felt fraternities play at Dartmouth. His main theme was that the best fraternities contribute to the development of leaders. Nelson seemed more than usually vocal on the pressing need for leaders in all sectors of our national life, certainly including politics (and perhaps it is worth noting here that one of our delegation, Rep. Robert McClory, Zeta '30, played a prominent role as a member of the House Judiciary Committee during the Nixon hearings).

Nelson was excited, enthusiastic and optimistic about his new enterprise with The Nelson Rockefeller Collection Reproductions. As he put it, "To want beautiful things is a very human instinct, but good art has been moving out of the range of large numbers of art lovers who would like to own beautiful things." He firmly believed his reproductions would enrich the lives of many people, but we gave him a lot of kidding about the way he and his wife, Happy, were dominating TV with their interviews about his new business. He seemed to thoroughly enjoy the ribbing.

As the luncheon progressed, in answer to questions, Brother Rockefeller expressed his deep concern over the developments in Iran, which he feared would have dangerous repercussions in Saudi Arabia and the entire Middle East.

He and Brother Dick Hood, who had headed the FBI office in Washington under Hoover, talked about the severe effects of the continual attacks upon the FBI and CIA.

Despite the heavy overtones due to worries about the major events affecting our country and the world, the luncheon was indeed fraternal and filled with the joys of friendship in the best traditions of Psi Upsilon.

The fact that these annual luncheons have lasted, with our abiding friendships, for so many years is some evidence of the importance of the fraternal bond, not only in college but for all the years of our lives.

Alumni News and Notes

Bill Webster Heads FBI

by Michael S. Greenstein, Pi '70

William Hedgecock Webster, Gamma '45, who became the Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation in February, 1978, has already set several precedents for the federal government's chief law enforcement and investigatory organization.

Webster, a native of St. Louis, is the first F.B.I. director who did not come up through the ranks of the organization. Before his appointment by President Jimmy Carter, Webster was a Federal Court of Appeals judge, making him also the first jurist to head the F.B.I. In addition, he is the first college man — and the first fraternity man — to hold the position.

The U.S. Senate granted Webster, a Republican, speedy confirmation when he was nominated for a 10-year term in the post early last year. Webster was actually the Carter Administration's second choice, after another Republican, Federal Judge Frank Johnson of Alabama, withdrew from consideration because of health.

Webster then succeeded Clarence Kelley as F.B.I. director on Feb. 23, 1978. He became the Bureau's third permanent director, although there had been some interim directors between the death of J. Edgar Hoover and the appointment of Kelley, a former F.B.I. agent and police chief of Kansas City.

Webster is another Missourian. Born March 6, 1924, in St. Louis, the 55-year-old Webster received his early education in nearby Webster Groves. He entered Amherst College in 1943 and was a member of the Gamma Chapter of Psi Upsilon's 1943 pledge delegation. At Amherst he was active in campus affairs and was awarded a Bachelor of Arts degree in 1947. In 1975 he returned to his alma mater to accept an honorary Doctor of Laws degree.

Webster received his Juris Doctor degree from Washington University in St. Louis in 1949, and has also received numerous honorary degrees and alumni citations from that institution, which he also serves as a member of the board of trustees. He also holds honorary degrees from DePauw University and William Woods College.

After serving as a Lieutenant in the United States Navy and Naval Reserve and receiving his law degree, Webster was admitted to the Missouri Bar and practiced law with a prestigious St. Louis firm from 1949 until 1959. He then served as U.S. Attorney for the Eastern District of Missouri from 1960 to 1961. After returning to private practice from 1961 to 1964, he became a member of the Missouri Board of Law Examiners, which reviews the qualifications of applicants to the bar, from 1964 to 1969.

In 1970, Webster was appointed Judge of the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Missouri and in 1973 was elevated to the United States Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit. During his service on the bench, he was Chairman of the Judicial Conference Advisory Committee on the Criminal Rules and was a member of the Ad Hoc Committee on Habeas Corpus and the Committee of Court Administration.

A member of the American Bar Association, the Council of American Law Institute, the Order of the Coif, the Missouri Bar Association, and the Metropolitan St. Louis Bar Association, Webster served as Chairman of the Corporation, Banking and Business Law Section of the American Bar Association, and is a fellow of the American Bar Foundation.

Mr. Webster is married to the former Drusilla Lane and they are the parents of three children: Drusilla L. Busch, William H., Jr., and Katherine H.

In the selection of Webster, President Carter voiced the hope that having a respected jurist head the F.B.I. would help restore inner morale and public confidence in the law enforcement agency. Previous to Webster's appointment, the agency had been upset by disclosures of illegal activities ranging from illegal break-ins to misuse of F.B.I. personnel during the tenure of the late J. Edgar Hoover.

During his conformation hearings, Webster pledged to ensure the nation's chief law enforcement agency would itself obey the law. Already in his tenure, Webster has fired two supervisors and censured several other agents for their part in illegal activities.

Webster had been characterized as a "no-nonsense" judge on the federal bench, and former Attorney General Griffin B. Bell described him as "a sound person of moderate views and one in whom the American people can have confidence."

Webster has already been considered once for appointment to the U.S. Supreme Court (by then-President Gerald Ford in 1975), and speculation in Washington indicates he may well be considered for that bench again when his current 10-year term at the F.B.I. expires.

Editor's Note: The Editors of THE DIAMOND OF PSI UPSILON read many of newspapers and a considerable number of newsletters issued by chapter alumni organizations. They also read the publications which come to them from several of the colleges and universities where Psi Upsilon has chapters. From these sources we get most of the alumni notes for our quarterly issues.

However, we are well aware that we miss a lot of the news of the activities of many of our alumni. It is suggested that if any Psi U, no matter where located, reads an article of interest about any other Psi U, he cut out the article and send it along to our office at 2 Station Square, Paoli, Pa. 19301.

This section of our magazine serves many purposes. It lets other alumni know about the latest doings of their brothers. It also brings to the undergraduate readers an idea of what so many members of our fraternity are capable of accomplishing.

May we ask your cooperation? We want to do the best job done by any fraternity journal. — The Editors.

Robert W. Stallman, Rho '33, professor emeritus of English at the University of Connecticut, has spent many years in the field of education and writing. His most recent publication, The Figurehead and Other Poems, is a collection of his poems spanning the years from 1944 to 1977. Most of them have already appeared in print in many publications throughout the world.

Brother Stallman, who was born in Milwaukee in 1911, now makes his home in Storrs, Conn., where he lives with his wife, Lillian. He continues to write and contemplate other prose works for future publication.

Francis Lewis Gould, Delta '05, continues to be active in the field of wine and wine culture from his home in St. Helena, Calif. He writes a newsletter about wines for the industry located in California's Napa Valley. His theme, which runs through all of his writing for the wine industry, is the soft sell. His philosophy has proven to be most successful for the Charles Krug Winery, with which he has direct relationship. He was recently written up in Wines & Vines, the authoritative publication of the grape and wine industry as the "Grand Old Man of Wine."

Leonard A. Peduto, Delta '71, has been appointed a Deputy Attorney General of New Jersey, with his office located in Newark. He resides in nearby West Orange.

Richard Haywood, Delta '54, reports he had the chance to visit the new Delta Chapter house and to talk with the younger brothers. He said he found that present problems were the same as those which existed in his days in the chapter.

Brother Haywood is teaching Russian history at Purdue University and has been engaged in considerable research on the subject. During 1977-78 he took a sabbatical leave, traveling to Europe to read and research in the various libraries.

Charles D. Abba, Theta '51, has been superintendent of schools in Schenectady, N.Y., the largest public school system in the New York Capital District, since 1972. Despite administering a system with more than 1,000 employees, more than 10,000 students and an annual budget of more than $25 million, Abba still finds the time to serve as Union's Alumni Council athletics liaison representative. He was a football lineman as an undergraduate.

Robert Anderson, Omega '39

Robert Anderson, Omega '39, received the 1978 International Executive of the Year award from the Brigham Young University College of Business and Graduate School of Management. Anderson, chairman of the board and chief executive officer of the Atlantic Richfield Company and a Trustee of the University of Chicago, was also the subject of an extensive profile in the Jan. 17, 1977 issue of New West magazine. He owns a 100,000-acre ranch near Roswell, N.M.

William Aughton, Epsilon Nu '74, is now Dr. Aughton. He is an oral surgeon residing in Oak Park, Mich. Now his wife, Maureen, is attending law school.

John J. "Jay" Berwanger, Omega '36, the former "One-Man Team" from the University of Chicago, was the first player ever drafted by the National Football League. That was 43 years ago, and Berwanger ultimately spurned the NFL offers to accept a marketing position with a Chicago rubber company. Today, Berwanger is president of that company. He says his only regret about passing up the chance for fame and fortune in pro football was not having the foresight to ask the Chicago Bears, who obtained negotiating rights to him, for lifetime season tickets as part of the package they offered. "Today," he laments, "I could really use those Bears' tickets. You just can't get 'em."

John Roosevelt Boettiger, Gamma '60, authored a book entitled A Love in Shadow about his parents, journalist Clarence John Boettiger and Anna Roosevelt, daughter of President Franklin Delano Roosevelt and Eleanor Roosevelt, his grandparents. Boettiger is a professor of Human Development at Hampshire College in Amherst.

William C. "Bill" Bost, Chi Delta '74, is now in law school at Campbell College in North Carolina. Between graduation and law school, Bost had extensive political experience with the presidential campaigns of Terry Sanford and Morris Udall. He was also accepted at Duke's divinity school, but law and politics won out.

William G. Callow, Rho '43, was elected in November 1977 to a 10-year term on the Supreme Court of Wisconsin. Callow was formerly a county court judge for 16 years.

Bridgford Hunt, Tau '44, has headed his own personnel administration consulting firm in New York City since 1961. He recently authored an article entitled "The Good Side of Office Politics" for United Airlines' Mainliner magazine.

Joseph L. Pyle Jr., Tau '48, an investment banker for Kidder Peabody in Philadelphia, has been one of Chester County's two representatives to the Southeastern Pennsylvania Transportation Authority for the past 15 years, much of that time as vice-chairman. A commuter himself, Pyle has been a leading advocate of mass transit in the Philadelphia area.

Leo H. Schoenhofen, Rho '36, retired in 1977 as board chairman of the Marcor Corporation after negotiating its merger with the Mobil Oil Corporation. Marcor's two main units were Montgomery Ward and Company and the Container Corporation of America. He began his 36-year business career as an oiler in Container's paper mill near Philadelphia. In retirement, however, he still serves on the boards of six firms and is a trustee of Northwestern University.

John Paul Stevens, Omega '41, was appointed to the Supreme Court of the United States by then-President Gerald Ford in 1976. The Illinois jurist has already won the respect and admiration of various women's and civil rights groups for his considered opinions in several anti-discrimination decisions.

Edward N. Whitney, Rho '13, is a retired civil engineer in Durango, Colo., where he has lived for more than two decades. The hearty Whitney is often seen riding his bicycle around the Southwestern Colorado town and is actively involved in various solar energy projects and other energy conservation interests.

Charles B. "Bud" Wilkinson, Mu '37, is in his second season as head coach of the St. Louis Cardinals of the National Football League. The Cardinals finished strongly last season, Wilkinson's first coaching venture since leaving the University of Oklahoma 15 years before. While there, of course, he coached the Sooners to three national championships. In between he served as a television commentator, director of the President's Council on Physical Fitness, and administrator of the Public Employees Benefit Service.

David M. Lilly, Zeta '39, has become dean of the College of Business Administration of the University of Minnesota. The former president and board chairman of the Toro Company, Lilly also served from 1976 to 1978 on the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System.

Two Years in the Field

by Michael J. Huffman, Zeta '77

Psi Upsilon has been on the upswing in many areas over the past two years. Indicators of this surge include the continued increases in annual giving, the well-attended and exuberant conventions, and the steady growth of the membership in our Chapters. It hasn't been all roses; lack of human and financial resources has caused the Fraternity to fall short on a few chances.

Among our high points has been our efforts to reactivate old Chapters and to initiate new ones. We have entered three campuses: Wisconsin (the Rho), McGill (the Epsilon Phi) and Tufts (an interested group from this Boston-area university had contacted the Psi U office). At each school a group of about ten men was pledged to Psi Upsilon.

From those starts, students, interested alumni and our office have worked together to insure the survival of these groups. Somehow, we have to help each of them find a place to meet or live as a unit, teach them sound operating procedures and instill in them the spirit of Psi U. That all three are still progressing is a source of great satisfaction to me, and a tribute to the determination of all those involved.

These jobs have only begun. The Rho situation is uncertain; its potential is great, but the Rho needs more attention. The Epsilon Phi has started in a promising manner; a fine House has been secured in Montreal. Lodging was recently rented for the provisional Chapter at Tufts. The rise in fuel costs makes their early financial picture marginal; Boston alumni will be needed for assistance and supervision.

There is talk of reviving Chapters such as the Nu at Toronto or the Epsilon at Berkeley. Still other campuses are fertile for expansion. We must remember we have limited resources and be wary of overextending ourselves. Our performance at Wisconsin, McGill and Tufts will be an indicator of the state of the Fraternity. If they prosper, then we will know we are not only selling, but servicing a good product. We will also be assured that our existent Chapters are receiving proper care.

Psi Upsilon has proved to be a most gracious employer. I have traveled throughout the United States and Canada. The challenges I faced helped me to mature. The pay has been good (I encourage interested Psi U's to apply for future openings), but the greatest rewards have been the associations I made. The alumni I came in contact with are not only good Psi U's, but they maintain an interest in today's undergrad. A man who fills this description is invariably a stimulating and worthwhile acquaintance.

Members of Psi Upsilon are distinguished by their genuine interest in one another. This interest is engendered by the recognition that Psi Upsilon is composed of distinct, autonomous Chapters who share a heritage of excellence. We are keen to learn more about a Brother who felt the Psi U experience in a different place and time.

The existence of this mutual regard, and the strength of our Chapters today, provides us with a solid foundation. We will have many opportunities to make Psi Upsilon an even more vital organization. With capable hands guiding our Fraternity, there are great years ahead for Psi U.

Editor's Note: Mike Huffman was appointed Field Director for Psi Upsilon Fraternity upon his graduation from Dartmouth College in 1977. He spent most of his two years on the road, visiting each Chapter of the Fraternity at least once, stimulating the renewal of several once-dormant Chapters, keynoting the establishment of new Chapters, and providing leadership and guidance to current Chapters. In September, as he begins work towards an M.B.A. at Northwestern University, his duties as Field Director are being assumed by Michael J. Crane, Omega '79.

The Buried Jewels Glitter Still

Peter Alden GaBauer, Pi '25 Editor Emeritus, THE DIAMOND OF PSI Upsilon

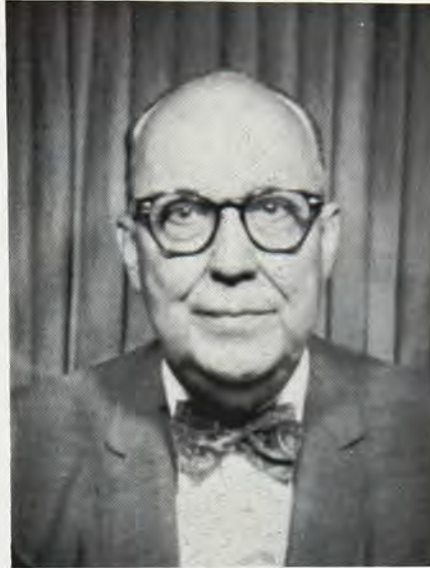

Peter Alden GaBauer, Pi '25, archivist and co-editor of The Annals of Psi Upsilon published in 1941, and Editor Emeritus of THE DIAMOND, passed away following a heart attack at his home in Troy, N.Y., May 30, 1979. He was 76. A native of Amsterdam, N.Y., he was educated in the Troy school system, and received his bachelor's degree from Syracuse University. He served his Alma Mater and his Fraternity with distinction through the years. Among these, Brother GaBauer served as vice chairman of the first national Annual Giving Campaign, and was active in the annual affairs of the Class of 1925 at the University.

He became advertising manager for the American Sugar "Domino" Refining Co. in 1929, then headed by Earl D. Babst, Iota-Phi '93. He later assumed the same position with Chasers, Inc., then headed by J. Roy Allen, Pi '04.

During World War II, Brother GaBauer served in a civilian capacity with the Bureau of Naval Personnel's Dependents Welfare Division, which was headed by Albert C. Jacobs, Capt., USNR, Phi '21. For his efforts for the War Shipping Administration and the Armed Forces in a plan for "Preparation of Consolidated Survivor Reporting Following Merchant Ship Disasters," he was awarded a citation and the highest civilian award.

Until retirement, he was employed by the Walker-Radcliff Co., high quality printers headquartered in New Haven, Conn. During this period he played an important part in the development of the U.S. Olympic Committee's various reports and programs. He also continued a close professional relationship with the Eastern College Athletic Conference that began with its founding in 1938.

A former President of the Syracuse University Alumni Association of New York, former member of the Board of Governors of the Psi Upsilon Alumni Association, a founder and past President of the New York Metropolitan Association of Psi Upsilon, Brother GaBauer also served as a General Chairman of the Fraternity's National Conventions.

Peter A. GaBauer, Pi '25

Returning to Troy about 15 years ago, Brother GaBauer served as a consultant on fundraising for Emma Willard School and several colleges. He was a member of the Troy YMCA, Friends of Troy Library, and the Pawling Avenue Methodist Church.

He is survived by his wife, the former Mary Louis Anglin, a son, Peter A., Jr., and a sister, Florence. Interment was in Hagaman Mills, N.Y., Cemetery.

Richard D. Mallory, Delta '28

Richard D. Mallory, Delta '28, died recently at his home in Santa Fe, N.M. It is believed that he had been in declining health during his retirement years.

Brother Mallory was an active member of the Delta and, after he received his Bachelor's Degree, continued in the service of New York University as part of the English Department. During his early years as an instructor he pursued his Master's and Doctorate degrees. At the same time, he was a regular visitor at the Delta Chapter, and served as an unofficial advisor for many years until his retirement some years ago.

R. Roy Perkins, Psi '19

R. Roy Perkins, Psi '19, died October 26, 1978. He had served his Alma Mater, Hamilton College, and the Psi Chapter for over sixty years.

While Brother Perkins was an undergraduate, he gained admission into the Senior Honor Society and Pentagon, another society on campus that recognizes unusual achievement. He was also the editor of Hamilton Life, the weekly undergraduate newspaper. Upon graduation he was awarded the Elihu Root Fellowship, enabling him to spend two additional years at Harvard University.

After his graduate work was completed, he joined the Detroit, Mich., Library Bureau, then later accepted a teaching position at the Port Jervis, N.Y. High School. In 1926, Perkins came to the Utica Free Academy as a teacher of chemistry. He served in several other school posts before becoming principal in 1958. He served in that capacity until 1962, when he retired.

During his years in New York State, Brother Perkins often visited his beloved Hamilton College and the Psi Chapter. He also found time to attend as many annual conventions of the Fraternity as most members of Psi U, with but few exceptions.

Brother Perkins leaves his wife, Dale, one son and two daughters, who, in the words of Gardner A. Callanen, Psi '28, "Deserve our gratitude for sharing with us the time of this fine, generous Psi U."

Willard Boyd McDowell, Pi '42

Willard Boyd McDowell, Pi '42, succumbed at University Hospital, Syracuse, N.Y., December 2, 1978. A resident of DeWitt, he had been a sales representative for a number of years for Mead-Johnson Co., manufacturers of pharmaceutical products. Born in Elmira, Brother Bill came from a long line of Pi Chapter Psi U's, starting with his grandfather, Boyd, Pi '81; and including his father, Robert Pitkin, Pi '13; then following with Robert Adams, Pi '40; John Adams, Pi '45; Boyd II, Pi '47, all Brothers. The fourth generation saw Willard Boyd Jr., Pi '47, his son; then Bennett Adams, Pi '79, his nephew, all initiated into the Pi Chapter. Survivors include his mother, his wife, the former Betty Sears, plus two daughters and another son. Services were held in DeWitt Community Church with a large attendance of Psi Upsilon Brothers present. Burial was in White Chapel Gardens.

Cesar L. Berthau, Epsilon '19

A most interesting and remarkable career ended February 12, 1977, when Cesar L. Berthau, Epsilon '19, passed away in Peru, Vt. "Pete," as he was known to many, was a direct descendant on both sides of his family from a hearty group associated with the invasion of California by the well-known "Forty-Niners," which included both of his grandfathers.

During World War I, he served as a Regular Army artillery officer. Following graduation from college, he had a long career in the field of banking, both on the West as well as the East coast, which included a term as Director of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York from 1960 to 1963. Earlier, he had been associated with the Mercantile Bank Trust Co., of San Francisco, known today as the Wells Fargo Bank. Later, when he came East, he became a Vice President of the Marine Midland Trust Co. Then he went with the Peoples Trust Co. of New Jersey, where he rose through several executive positions. He retired as its Chief Executive Officer in 1963.

Despite his many interests in life, he found time to serve Psi Upsilon Fraternity as a member of the Executive Council for a number of years. An avid hunter and fisherman, he enjoyed hunting grizzlies, moose, caribou, and other wild life in the High Sierras, the Rockies of Canada, as well as in Alaska. Trout fishing was one of his favorites in the wilds of California, too.

Prior to getting into the monetary field, he had been engaged in cattle herding, gold mining, timbering, drilling construction, stevedoring, and as a purser for the old "around the world" Pacific Mail Steamship Co.

Brother "Pete" had a considerable interest in foreign affairs to add to his ventures, when he aided in the liquidation of the foreign debts of Marine Midland. The New York Regional Planning Association can also be added to his long list of activities, as can the time and effort he spent developing the banking system in the State of New Jersey. With all of his many other varied interests, Psi Upsilon was a major force in his life.

Edward Charles Hughes, Sr., M.D., Pi '22

Edward Charles Hughes, M.D., Pi '22, widely known obstetrician and gynecologist and ever loyal Brother of Psi Upsilon, died in Syracuse, N.Y. November 7, 1976. A life-long resident of Syracuse, he received his B.A. degree from Syracuse University, then went on to its Medical College. Brother Hughes served his residency and internship at Brooklyn, N.Y., Hospital, then opened private practice in 1930. Among his survivors is Edward C. Hughes, Jr., M.D., Psi '61, a Syracuse surgeon specializing in orthopedics.

Brother "Eddie" served at the Upstate Medical Center and rose from instructor to professor and chairman on the Department of Obstetrics. He also was Senior Attending Obstetrician at Crouse-Irving Memorial Hospital in Syracuse, plus being a consultant in his field for other hospitals in the area.

Crouse-Irving Memorial Hospital has since set up a memorial fund in his memory.

He was a trustee and past president of the New York State Medical Society, and served as trustee for the Empire State Medical, Scientific and Educational Foundation, and the Milton Helpem Library.

In 1975, Brother Hughes was recipient of the Upstate Medical Center's Distinguished Alumni Award and the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologist's Distinguished Service Award.

Norman Loyall McLaren, Epsilon '14

N. Loyall McLaren, Epsilon '14, creator of the Irvine Foundation in California, died at the age of 85 October 23, 1977, in San Francisco.

As financial advisor to Orange County rancher James Irvine II, Brother McLaren in 1937 drafted the estate trust document. This meant that upon Irvine's death some 10 years later, it put the majority stock and control of the company in the hands of a charitable foundation.

Upon the death of a son of Irvine's, in 1959, McLaren became Chairman of the Board of the foundation. This post he held until 1976, not long before the foundation sold its shares of Irvine Co. stock for $184 million in cash. The foundation was required to divest itself of Irvine Co. stock under the Tax Reform Act of 1969.

A long-time counsel for the Irvine Foundation described Brother McLaren as a philanthropist whose regard for the legacy of James Irvine was of long lasting benefit to California charities.

A life-long resident of San Francisco, his own accounting firm, McLaren, Goode & Co., was merged into Haskins & Sells in 1953. He had been a director of Pacific Telephone & Telegraph Co., Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railroad, Rheem Manufacturing Co., and the Federal Reserve Bank of California.

Brother McLaren found time in his busy life to serve his country, which included being a retired Rear Admiral in the U.S. Navy; had served as treasurer of the United Nations Formative Conference in San Francisco in 1945; was commissioned in the U.S. Army with star rank to participate in the 1945 war reparations conference in Moscow; and was a member of a group that surveyed the Internal Revenue Service for Congress in 1947-48. In addition, he had served as President of the American Institute of Accountants and of the Harbor Commissioners of California. He was a Regent of the University of San Francisco, and member of the advisory councils of the University of California School of Business Administration and Stanford University's Hoover Institute. He had a Brother, since deceased, Richard A. McLaren, Epsilon '17, plus two sons, Kenneth L., Epsilon '40 and Thomas McLaren, Epsilon '42.

Col. Adolph Arthur Wulff, USAF (Ret.), Delta '27

Col. Adolph Arthur Wulff, Delta '27, passed on in early 1977, after a long and active life. Known for his pursuits as a linguist, art historian and European history student, as well as for his love of international relations, he received his M.A. degree from New York University. He took additional graduate studies in Europe, and at Harvard and Columbia Universities.

From 1931 to 1933, Brother Wulff served as a member of the faculty at Yale, and from 1958 until 1962 he was on the faculty at NYU. During his earlier days in the military, he assisted in the conviction of major Nazi war criminals, and headed the "Paperclip" Detachment which recruited German scientists for the U.S. Space program.
