Michael Bay Directs Pearl Harbor Epic

by Jean Gileno, Delta Zeta '94 (DePauw University)

On a sleepy Sunday morning in December, as children played and families prayed, squadrons of Japanese warplanes screamed across the skies of Hawaiian paradise and launched a surprise attack on the United States' armed forces at Pearl Harbor. The infamous day that jolted America from peaceful isolationism to total war is depicted in the new film, Pearl Harbor, directed by Michael Bay, Xi '86 (Wesleyan University).

Michael Bay, Xi '86

Opening on the Memorial Day 2001 weekend, Pearl Harbor, with a production budget of $135 million, is expected to be one of the most accurate World War II movies of its time. The blockbuster focuses on the life-changing events surrounding December 7, 1941 and the war's devastating impact on two daring young pilots played by Ben Affleck and Josh Hartnett and a dedicated nurse portrayed by Kate Beckinsale. It is a tale of catastrophic defeat, heroic victory, personal courage and overwhelming love set against a stunning backdrop of spectacular wartime action. Described as a cross between Saving Private Ryan and Titanic, the action in Pearl Harbor includes not only the devastating surprise attack by the Japanese but also the bombing of Tokyo by Jimmy Doolittle and his crew five months later.

Author and newscaster Tom Brokaw observed in The New York Times that World War II has been the subject of many epic motion pictures such as Battleground, The Battle of Britain, and Patton, but "it wasn't until recently that Hollywood began to treat the chaos, violence and random nature of combat in unsparing detail. The determination of a new generation of directors and technology are taking cinematic combat to new, utterly realistic levels."

Like Steven Spielberg's Saving Private Ryan, Michael Bay captures acts of individual heroism in Pearl Harbor. Unlike any other WWII film, Bay also seeks to capture the great loss of national innocence caused by the attack.

Pearl Harbor will delight fans of the striking pyrotechnics and extreme action scenes that have been widely praised in Bay's previous films. The task of coordinating extensive sets, massive crews and special effects used in the film is a daunting but natural progression for Bay's work. Last year during filming Bay told The New York Times, "We had 14 planes, 400 extras, bombs going off, everything timed. The Navy gave us so much stuff. We blew up over 10 600-foot ships. We did the largest film explosion I've ever seen. It took months to rig it and we had to make the world's largest gimbals - a whole front of a battleship flips over. Do you know how scary it is for a director to have 300 guys in the water, to have 80 stuntmen on 350,000 pounds of steel that goes upside down?"

Bay is known for carefully studying the reaction of his "target audience" at screenings and cutting his films accordingly. "If you're given $135 million to make a film, you better know who your target audience is," Bay told USA Today. He moves quickly and shoots four times the average amount of film in a day. While some critics dismiss his style as sensory overload, he is also widely praised for his sheer brilliance. Bay is not modest about his desire to please studio execs and his reputation for not going over budget is part of the appeal. "I know I'm going to go out there and make them money," he told USA Today. "When I make them money, I'm going to get power and I'm going to get my way in terms of doing things where I can branch out."

It took more than Hollywood's money to get Pearl Harbor made; ultimately it took the cooperation of the Pentagon and Secretary of Defense, William H. Cohen, Kappa '62 (Bowdoin College). Without the Pentagon's cooperation, there would have been no movie. Using a two-minute animation depicting the armor-piercing bomb that lifted the USS Arizona nine feet out of the water, Bay assured the military of his commitment to historical accuracy.

Filming at Pearl Harbor, where bullet strafing marks on the walls and floors are preserved, involved men and women currently stationed there and, in some cases, their children. Naval and army historians lent their support to ensure historical accuracy.

Pearl Harbor is also the work of Jerry Bruckheimer, who produced Bay's films Armageddon, The Rock, and Bad Boys, as well as screenwriter Randall Wallace (Braveheart, The Man in the Iron Mask). Bay met Bruckheimer while shooting a video for Days of Thunder and was offered Bad Boys, a stylish action comedy that grossed more than $160 million worldwide. The 1995 film starred Will Smith and Martin Lawrence.

Released on July 1, 1998, Armageddon is the eighth highest grossing movie to date and made Bay the youngest director to reach the billion-dollar box office mark worldwide. His involvement in the film extended into co-producing, casting, directing, and even shooting camera some days. Much of the film's humor was improvised. Bay even has a cameo role as a NASA engineer and is credited with the film's funniest line, "We don't wanna pay taxes. Ever."

Roger Ebert calls The Rock "a first-rate, slam-bang action thriller with a literate, witty screenplay and skilled craftsmanship in the direction and special effects." Starring Academy Award-winning actors, Sean Connery and Nicolas Cage, The Rock has just been released in a new DVD edition by Buena Vista Entertainment as part of its Criterion Collection. The new DVD includes audio commentary by Bay.

When Bruckheimer offered Bay the film, there was no script. "It's a trend in Hollywood," Bay says in the audio commentary to The Rock. "Films are greenlit before there's a fully developed script." The trend continued as Pearl Harbor evolved. "It was greenlit, then ungreenlit, then greenlit again, meaning I had to hire, fire, then rehire the whole crew. The whole film had a recipe for disaster, with so many locations," Bay told Variety.

The recipe for disaster translates to a recipe for success for Bay, who made his first feature at the age of 13; creating a fiery enemy spaceship attack on his train set and filming it with his mom's Super 8 camera. When the flames got out of control the fire department arrived to put out the firecracker-induced blaze.

As a teenager Bay worked for Lucasfilm, where a well-connected neighbor arranged a filing job. There he had the opportunity to watch Steven Spielberg create some of the greatest technical effects, stunts, and action sequences ever filmed. Spielberg's work on Raiders of the Lost Ark led an entire decade into big budget action/adventure movies. At the same time Bay began winning photography awards at Crossroads High School in Santa Monica and then headed off to Wesleyan University for film school.

His senior thesis, a short film called Benjamin's Birthday won the school's prestigious Frank Capra Award. "That's when I discovered that I really liked making an audience laugh," Bay told USA Today. "I saw 350 people staring at the screen, laughing. I thought that was pretty cool."

Bay returned to Los Angeles and studied at Pasadena's exclusive Art Center College of Design where a student project caught the attention of Capitol Records.

His ninety-second Coke commercial led to directing a surprise comeback video for Donny Osmond. He gained immediate hands-on shooting experience with Propaganda Films creating music videos for Tina Turner, Meatloaf, Lionel Richie, Wilson Phillips and the DiVinylns, earning Bay a number of MTV award nominations. His first move into television advertising, an ad for the American Red Cross, won a Clio. He was awarded the Grand Prix Clio for Commercial of the Year for his Got Milk/Aaron Burr commercial and also filmed advertisements for Nike, Reebok, Coca Cola, Budweiser, Miller Lite, and Mercedes. At the Cannes International Film Festival he won the Gold Lion for the Best Beer Campaign for Miller Lite, as well as the Silver Lion for Got Milk. In 1995, the Directors Guild of America honored Bay as Commercial Director of the year. Within the last decade Bay has won every major commercial direction award.

It remains to be seen whether Pearl Harbor will join such recent epics as Gladiator, Titanic, and Braveheart as an Academy Award winner and whether Michael Bay will become Psi Upsilon's eighth Academy Award nominee. Pearl Harbor, with its grand scale and intimate story line, might just fit the bill. ♦

Undergraduates Join Alumni in 2000 Annual Fund

Members of the 1833 Club, Justin Jindra, Omicron '02, Lucas Ross '03 and Jake Meyer, Xi '01 were also delegates to the 158th Convention in Syracuse.

The 1833 Club recognizes gifts from undergraduates members to Psi U's Annual Fund. Every year, members donate to the Annual Fund which provides leadership education, chapter consultant visits and scholarships to our deserving brothers. Special recognition is given to those members who give loyally every year.

The 1833 Club encourages members to build their record of consecutive years of unrestricted gifts to the Annual Fund earlier and faster. To date, the leading donor, Lawrence J. Loughlin, Jr., Epsilon Nu '53, has made gifts for 30 consecutive years.

and Norm Schoonover, Theta Theta '46
Arranged by Barry Gough, Zeta Zeta '62

Music by J.W. Crosley, "Navy Blue & Gold"

Note: This classic is not in the Psi U songbooks. It was introduced at the 105th Psi Upsilon Convention, hosted by the Theta Theta chapter in 1947. Based on a celebrated tune of the U.S. Naval Academy, "Navy Blue & Gold," this lovely song was written by two brothers of the Theta Theta who were then undergraduates. It was conveyed to Vancouver, British Columbia by Brother Gough, song master of the Zeta Zeta, and under his direction the Zeta Zeta gave an award winning performance at the University of British Columbia's Greek Songfest in 1962.

A New Look for Psi U on the World Wide Web

In February Psi Upsilon launched a new version of the fraternity's web site, introducing dramatic improvements to the site's look, structure and content.

The site now features a consistent look and feel throughout, highly readable text and a universal navigation system. All of these features help inform viewers that they are on the official Psi U site, while providing easy access back to the homepage.

Of special interest, the site now offers complete on-line Convention registration and current details about the 158th Convention. Psi U merchandise may also be purchased on line and members can make direct donations to the Annual Fund.

Soon, Psi U's database will allow members to search for fraternity brothers via the web and chapters will be able to submit electronic membership reports in the same way pledge reports are already submitted. The menu structure allows for a wealth of resources for undergraduates and alumni including a calendar of Psi Upsilon events, officer manuals and historical information.

While the WeAlumni.com service is no longer being maintained, improvements to the Psi U web will continue to meet the needs of undergraduates and alumni. ♦
